

PICTURE GALLERY

DIFFERENCE

Auchinleck and Drongan

VOLUNTEERS recently pulled on their Wellies during Make A Difference Day to give wildlife a boost at Hannahston Community Woodland at Drongan. It was a chance for the local community to become involved in creating new habitats for birds, insects, mammals and amphibians. Volunteers helped build a bird box village, planted gorse, blackthorn bushes and bluebells and built log habitat piles.

Rosalee McCusky and Coalfield Environmental Officer Paul Sutcliffe are pictured with a group of young volunteers who were planting bluebells at the Conservation Volunteering Day at Hannahston recently.

LEFT: This group of volunteers and staff were digging deep into their time to help out at Hannahston Community Woodland in Drongan, as part of the Make a Difference Day to promote volunteering.
ABOVE: Volunteering certainly isn't for the faint! This young man is helping make bird boxes as part of the Conservation Volunteering Day at Hannahston. Also pictured are Councilor Tammy Farrel, Gail Caldwell and MSP Conservation Officer Zoe Clelland.
BELOW: Struggling off the cold weather at Hannahston during the Conservation Day. Pictured are, left, volunteer Hugh Dennis, students Adam Mitchell and Lindsay Gemmel, volunteer Mark Proulx and student Maxima Hunter prepare to plant gorse.

